- ○A encrypt
- ○B refine
- ○C update
- ○D repurpose
- ○E discount

Question 2 TC 2빈칸

For each blank, select one entry from the corresponding column of choices.

The psychologist's new findings present the discipline with a (i) _____: her results pose a problem for the standard theory, although the alternative theories she proposes are (ii) _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)
predicament	unconvincing
paradigm	persuasive
prototype	versatile

Question 3 TC 3빈칸

For each blank, select one entry from the corresponding column of choices.

Give a computer (i) _____ task, winning at chess, say, or predicting the weather, and the machine beats humans nearly every time. Yet when problems are (ii) _____, or require combining varied sources of information, computers are (iii) _____ human intelligence.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
a well-defined	nuanced	not matching
a random	inconsequential	unyielding
an open-ended	solvable	able to dwarf

Questions 4 to 5 are based on the following passage.

Unlike herbivores and omnivores, predators have traditionally been thought not to balance nutrient intake because of the assumption that animal tissue as a food source varies little and is nutritionally balanced. But chemical analysis of invertebrate prey reveals remarkable variation in nutrient composition among species; even within species, nutrient composition may vary considerably. Greenstone suggested that predators may select food items according to their nutrient contents. Jensen et al (2011) have shown experimentally that even sit-and-wait invertebrate predators with limited mobility can work to address nutrient deficiencies. The wolf spider, for instance, has been shown to regulate nutrient intake by extracting more dry mass from a prey item if it contains a higher proportion of a nutrient that was deficient in the previous prey.

Question 4 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage supplies information for answering which of the following questions?

○A Do invertebrate predators with full mobility address nutrient needs in the same fashion as sit-and-wait invertebrate predators with limited mobility?

○B Why would there be a considerable variation in nutrient composition within prey of a given species?

○C Is all of the nutrient content of invertebrate prey contained in the dry mass?

○D What would a wolf spider do if a fly it was eating contained a higher proportion of a certain nutrient than was present in the spider's recent prey?

○E How is a wolf spider able to determine that some prey it is eating contains a higher proportion of a nutrient that was deficient in the previous prey?

Question 5 RC

Select one answer choice.

Which of the following best describes the organization of the passage as a whole?

○A A phenomenon is described, and an interpretation is offered.

○B A claim is made, and the corroborating evidence is evaluated.

○C A hypothesis is presented and undermined by recent findings.

○D A contrast is noted and shown to be specious based on recent findings.

○E A series of assumptions is presented and shown to be based on sound reasoning.

Question 6 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

It is troubling that blogs, which may be among the least reliable sources of information in human history, occupy such _____ positions in Internet search engine results.

☐A enviable

☐B conspicuous

☐C suspect

☐D dubious

☐E controversial

☐F prominent

Question 7 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

Human hearing is remarkably _____: an attentive listener knows if a band's drummer is as little as one thousandths of a second late on the beat.

- ☐ A sophisticated
- ☐ B adaptable
- ☐ C independent
- ☐ D sensitive
- ☐ E versatile
- ☐ F discerning

Question 8 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

Three of the nation's largest airlines could be operating under bankruptcy protection in coming weeks, analysts say, the latest sign of the industry's _____ as it lurches through a historic transformation.

- ☐ A upheaval
- ☐ B exorbitance
- ☐ C affluence
- ☐ D peril
- ☐ E convulsion
- ☐ F opulence

Question 9 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

Although in his new book he tends to repeat himself like a _____ uncle, McHughen makes a persuasive case for the safety of thinking with genes to create new foods.

- ☐ A taciturn
- ☐ B reserved
- ☐ C prototypical
- ☐ D cantankerous
- ☐ E loquacious
- ☐ F garrulous

Questions 10 to 12 are based on the following passage.

Julie Roy Jeffrey's recent book《The Great Silent Army of Abolitionism》shows how women participated in all aspects of the antislavery movement in the United States, from its inception in the early 1830s through the end of the Civil War (1861–1865). While scholars have already pointed out the importance of women's work in early abolitionist circles, especially in spreading a grassroots antislavery message through the constant and tireless circulation of petitions, Jeffery disputes certain aspects of the traditional account of their participation. For example, even though the abolitionist movement split into political and nonpolitical wings at the end of the 1830s and women were largely relegated to the less politicized faction, Jeffrey does not accept the view that women's participation became marginalized as a result. She demonstrates that women found numerous ways to persist effectively in the cause, such as by organizing the antislavery fund-raising fairs of the 1840s. She also disputes the notion that African American women were relegated to secondary positions in the largely White movement. Their own abolitionist societies, she argues, often responded to the crises of the pre-Civil War decades, such as the Fugitive Slave Law, more directly than did integrated abolitionist groups.

Question 10 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage is primarily concerned with

○A using specific examples to illustrate certain shortcomings in historians' traditional approach to a particular historical period

○B outlining the issues underlying a debate among scholars about a particular historical period

○C considering the work of a particular scholar on a certain subject in contrast to other work on the same subject

○D identifying some of the most important influences on a particular historian's recent work

○E pointing out certain inconsistencies in a recent work about a particular historical period

Question 11 RC

(Highlighted portion: "scholars")

Select one answer choice.

Which of the following is cited by the "scholars" as an example of the important work done by early abolitionist women?

○A The organization of fund-raising fairs

○B The campaign against the Fugitive Slave Law

○C The integration of the abolitionist movement

○D The circulation of antislavery petitions

○E The formation of African American abolitionist societies

Question 12 RC

(Highlighted portion: "fund-raising fairs of the 1840s")

Select one answer choice.

The author mentions the "fund-raising fairs of the 1840s" primarily in order to

○A provide an example of the kind of grassroots work cited by scholars in support of their claim that women played an important role in early abolitionist circles

○B give an example of evidence used by Jeffrey to support her challenge to the claim that women's participation in the abolitionist movement became marginalized at the end of the 1830s

○C support Jeffrey's claim that in the decades preceding the Civil War, African American women's abolitionist groups were often more effective than were integrated abolitionist groups

○D show how a split in the abolitionist movement into political and nonpolitical factions resulted in the marginalization of women's participation

○E make a comparison between the kinds of abolitionist activities favored by integrated abolitionist groups and those favored by African American women's abolitionist groups

Section 2 15 Questions · 23 Minutes

Question 1 TC 1빈칸

For the blank, select the entry that best completes the text.

Those who had once been his _____ within the bureaucracy, responsive to his every string-pulling maneuver, were now distressingly prone to independent judgment, and amicable enough but with an infuriating, vaguely superior manner.

- ○A colleagues
- ○B friends
- ○C mentors
- ○D marionettes
- ○E proteges

Question 2 TC 2빈칸

For each blank, select one entry from the corresponding column of choices.

Though acknowledging the unstated assumptions that commentators on her paper had identified, the geologist pointed out that such assumptions were (i) _____ the context of her research, and therefore their existence did not (ii) _____ her conclusions.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)
antithetical to	prefigure
legitimate within	validate
implausible in	impede

Question 3 TC 2빈칸

For each blank, select one entry from the corresponding column of choices.

Defying expectation, the electorate seems poised to (i) _____ a number of political tenets so (ii) _____ that they are often paraded as fact.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)
propound	entrenched
reject	intricate
uphold	tenuous

Question 4 TC 3빈칸

For each blank, select one entry from the corresponding column of choices.

A (i) _____ assumption of the model is that (ii) _____ the living standards of people living adjacent to a protected area will necessarily enhance conservation within the protected area. Studies of conservation attitudes of people in South Africa and Tanzania have found a positive correlation between affluence and conservation attitudes, but it is unlikely that an improvement in the living standards of communities near protected areas will inevitably (iii) _____ the long-term viability of many species within the protected areas.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
misguided	raising	increase
conservative	discounting	inhibit
compelling	assessing	prevent

Questions 5 to 6 are based on the following passage.

American and British critics who wrote enthusiastic reviews of west African writer Amos Tutuola's 1952 book《The Palm-Wine Drinkard》typically dwelt less on his rhetorical skills and more on the text as an exemplar of naïve art. While these metropolitan critics were enchanted by the book, the initial literary reception in west Africa was by contrast highly critical. Concerned to avoid stereotyping, critics there objected to what they saw as very poor writing and expressed dismay at the uncritical promotion of the book. Many protested against what they saw as a metropolitan celebration of exoticism. For example, Adeagbo Akinjogbin attributed the novel's success in the West to ignorance and a desire to believe "all sorts of fantastic tales about Africa."

Question 5 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage suggests that the metropolitan critics who praised Tutuola's book would most likely agree with which of the following claims about literature?

○A Works that lack apparent sophistication might nevertheless have artistic value.

○B Poor writing is never acceptable in a literary work, even one presented as naïve art.

○C One can only fully appreciate a work of literature that is produced within a culture that one understands thoroughly.

○D Nonliterary agendas often hamper the production of great literature.

○E The value of a given literary work is mostly determined by the rhetorical skills of the author.

Question 6 RC

(Highlighted portion: "Adeagbo Akinjogbin")

Select one answer choice.

The author cites "Akinjogbin" in order to

- ○A challenge a claim made by some west African literary critics
- ○B illustrate some critics' opinions about the rhetorical style of Tutuola's book
- ○C introduce an alternative explanation for the response to Tutuola's book
- ○D articulate an objection to the positive critical response to Tutuola's book
- ○E defend the promotion of Tutuola's book as an example of naive art

Questions 7 to 9 are based on the following passage.

Unlike the static, classically composed portraits produced by her mentor Walker Evans, twentieth-century New York photographer Helen Levitt's photographs seem candid and spontaneous. Whereas Evans' subjects look directly into the camera, so that photographer and subject conspire in the making of a portrait, Levitt's subjects seem caught unawares. As a "street" photographer, before the term's invention, Levitt has claimed to have attempted to capture life as she found it. But there is a paradox to her technique. Her off-the-cuff aesthetic seemingly guarantees objectivity, since she was recording street scenes she happened upon, yet her photographs could be said to be highly subjective, to be reflections of Levitt's own distinctive preoccupations and ways of seeing. Unlike Evans' images, Levitt's are solely the products of the photographer without the conscious participation of their subjects. The repetitions evident in Levitt's choices of subjects, for example, her many photographs of children in masks and disguises, reveal more about Levitt herself than about those subjects.

Question 7 RC

Select one answer choice.

According to the passage, which of the following appears to ensure the objectivity of Levitt's photographs?

- ○A She took photographs in public places rather than in a studio.
- ○B She was not personally acquainted with the subjects of her photographs.
- ○C She did not arrange the scenes or pose the subjects she photographed.
- ○D She avoided using classical principles of composition.
- ○E She was guided by her subjects' preoccupations rather than by her own.

Question 8 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage asserts which of the following about Evans' portrait photographs?

○A Evans' photographs indicate a conscious rejection of the approaches associated with street photography.

○B The subjects in an Evans' photograph become collaborators in the portrait's creation.

○C Evans' photographic portraits usually reveal more about Evans than they do about his subjects.

○D Evans' static, classically composed portraits reveal Evans' preoccupation with maintaining an appearance of objectivity.

○E Evans' static, classically composed portraits reveal little about his distinctive way of seeing.

Question 9 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage suggests which of the following about street photography?

○A It characteristically depicts groups of people rather than individual subjects.

○B It tends to depict a narrow and repetitious range of subject matter.

○C It creates the impression of spontaneity but often actually involves scenes contrived by the photographer.

○D Its early practitioners were not accorded much recognition for their aesthetic achievements.

○E It had not been named as such when Levitt began practicing this kind of photography.

Question 10 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

By eating tiny organisms and incorporating their prey's nutrients into their own bodies, large insects become "nutrient packages" for larger insectivores for whom the pursuit of tiny organisms would be _____.

☐A unwieldy

☐B insalubrious

☐C unremunerative

☐D unnecessary

☐E inopportune

☐F unprofitable

Question 11 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

Despite the general _____ of Roman archaeological studies toward the major cities and their monuments, archaeology has contributed much to a better understanding of rural developments in Roman territory.

- ☐ A openness
- ☐ B indifference
- ☐ C hostility
- ☐ D animus
- ☐ E bias
- ☐ F orientation

Question 12 SE

Select the two answer choices that produce completed sentences that are alike in meaning.

Consuming 25 to 35 percent of their body weight each day, sea otters are not only _____ but highly specialized eaters, organizing themselves into groups that zero in on specific kinds of prey.

- ☐ A prodigious
- ☐ B undiscriminating
- ☐ C fastidious
- ☐ D picky
- ☐ E voracious
- ☐ F omnivorous

Question 13 is based on the following passage.

> Demographic data for Ollene Province indicate that over the next ten years the number of teenagers will decline and the number of children under the age of ten will rise. Most parents whose children are under ten and who want childcare during evening hours hire a babysitter who comes to their home, and virtually all babysitters are teenagers. Therefore, parents who want childcare during evening hours will have an increasingly hard time finding an available babysitter.

Question 13 CR

Select one answer choice.

The reasoning in the passage is most strongly supported if the demographic data also indicate that

- ○ A parents who have children under ten will spend an increasing number of evenings at home
- ○ B the average age of babysitters will increase slightly
- ○ C the number of children in daytime childcare will increase
- ○ D the proportion of teenagers who babysit regularly will increase
- ○ E there will be a decrease in the average number of children per household who are under ten

Questions 14 to 15 are based on the following passage.

For American artist Lucy Lippard, politically engaged art necessarily existed primarily outside of traditional art venues, in public spaces and in direct confrontation with political power. But for some other 1970s New York artists, it was inside the art world—and especially within museums—that the machinations of power could best be exposed and examined. Artists such as Adrian Piper worked within the genre known as "institutional critique" that explored and confronted the political and economic entanglements of museum patronage. Artists engaged in such work were often criticized for participating in the very art world system they purported to challenge. Yet their rigorous methodologies for researching and dramatically staging interventions in museum spaces yielded some of the era's most politically astute and influential artworks.

Question 14 RC

(Highlighted portion: "institutional critique")

Select one answer choice.

The passage ascribes some of the impact of "institutional critique" to which of the following attributes of the artists engaged in it?

- ○A Their refusal to directly confront powerful institutions
- ○B The economic entanglements between them and established art institutions
- ○C The meticulousness with which they approached their subject
- ○D The diversity of media in which they worked
- ○E The thorough knowledge of art history they typically possessed

Question 15 RC

(Highlighted portion: "politically astute")

Select one answer choice.

The author's characterization of certain artwork as "politically astute" serves to

- ○A elucidate the goals of an artistic practice mentioned earlier in the passage
- ○B respond to a rebuke of certain artists that is mentioned earlier in the passage
- ○C support a claim made in the preceding sentence
- ○D provide an example of the criticism leveled at certain artists
- ○E characterize some types of art as superior to others
