Questions 4 to 5 are based on the following passage.

A recent study shows that southern fulmars bring 40 percent more food to their chicks than do the closely related Antarctic petrels. Yet, fulmar chicks are only 10-20 percent heavier than petrel chicks. Hence, petrel chicks appear to be more efficient at converting their food into body mass. How can this be explained? First, while both species feed their chicks via regurgitation, petrels go on longer foraging trips. These trips may allow petrels to extract more water from the food or to partially digest their stomach contents, thereby creating more energy-rich meals. Thus, petrel chicks may receive more nutritious meals than fulmar chicks. Second, fulmar chicks are less well-insulated than are petrel chicks and may need to allocate a higher proportion of food energy to thermoregulation rather than growth.

Question 4 RC

Questions 10 to 12 are based on the following passage.

In his essay "Classical Jazz and the Black Arts Movement," Lorenzo Thomas argues that the Black Arts movement of the 1960s grew out of the Harlem Renaissance of the 1920s, during which African American artists produced work consciously grounded in their cultural heritage. Both movements hoped to advance African Americans' social position through cultural expression. Yet Black Arts movement scholar Larry Neal pronounced the Harlem Renaissance, which produced enduring works in many genres, "essentially a failure." According to Thomas, Neal's statement reflects a difference in the two movements' political and aesthetic philosophies. Whereas leaders of the Harlem Renaissance championed the cause of African Americans by demonstrating their achievements in "high art" as defined by European tradition, the Black Arts movement's leaders celebrated an African American aesthetic conceived as openly oppositional to that tradition. This is evident in the status held by jazz within the two movements. Commentators of the Harlem Renaissance cited, as evidence of the sophistication of jazz, the adaptation of jazz elements by European classical composers such as Antonin Dvorák. Some hoped that jazz musicians themselves would develop jazz into forms resembling European orchestral music. By contrast, asserts Thomas, Black Arts movement participants celebrated jazz as a musical form grounded in African Americans' historical experience that could not be evaluated using European aesthetic values.

Question 10 RC

Select one answer choice.

○B Its possibilities have been more thoroughly explored by African American artists than by European artists.

○C It has been unable to absorb or respond to artistic achievements in the traditions of other cultures.

○D It has been a vehicle for a political philosophy that does not support the interests of African Americans.

○E It sets a standard by which the accomplishments of non-European artists may be measured.

Question 12 RC

Select one answer choice.

○C regarded European aesthetic norms as an inappropriate standard for critiquing the jazz tradition

Questions 5 to 6 are based on the following passage.

In 1961, Julia Child published《Mastering the Art of French Cooking》, frequently described as revolutionary. According to legend, Child inspired Americans to exchange their bland cooking for French cuisine's rich flavors. Yet, Child's book was hardly singular among cookbooks. One publishing catalog lists almost as many books about French cooking in the decade before Child's book as in the decade after. While Child's book influenced a particular American cohort, its effect on the American publishing industry was minimal, a fact at odds with popular assumptions both about publishers and about Child's importance. We might expect Child's success to foster many imitations. Instead, American cookbooks pursued themes popular before Child's book was published, including a growing interest in the American cooking styles allegedly vanquished by Child.

Question 5 RC

(Highlighted portion: "According to legend, Child inspired Americans to exchange their bland cooking for French cuisine's rich flavors.")

Select one answer choice.

○B Child's《Mastering the Art of French Cooking》outsold all other books on French cooking in 1961.

○C American cooking became less marked by regional differences than it had been prior to 1961.

○D Many American dishes typically prepared by home cooks prior to 1961 declined in popularity.

○E Culinary experts in France came to regard American cooking differently than they had prior to 1961.

Question 6 RC

(Highlighted portion: "a growing interest in the American cooking styles allegedly vanquished by Child")

Select one answer choice.

It can be inferred from the passage that the "growing interest"

- ○A has been mischaracterized by some observers of American culinary trends of the 1960s
- ○B would not have occurred if Child's book had been the watershed some believed it was
- ○C reflected Americans' aspirations to be perceived as sophisticated about food and cooking
- ○D bolstered certain trends in the publishing industry that accelerated the release of new cookbooks
- ○E confirms Child's influence on at least one segment of the American public

Questions 7 to 9 are based on the following passage.

Stylistic analysis of ancient works of visual art can help in determining their time and place of origin. It is therefore important to identify the elements that constitute style and their relative value for establishing relationships among artworks. Most helpful in this regard is Schapiro's breakdown of style into the three properties of art: form elements, form relationships, and qualities (including overall expression). Particularly helpful is his distinction between the first two categories. Citing the wide distribution over time of pointed and rounded arches in architecture, for example, Schapiro points out that form elements alone are insufficient for characterizing a style: one must also look at the different ways that the elements are combined—the compositional pattern or syntax. He compares style directly to language as having a similar internal order and expressiveness; this order (or grammar) can distinguish one stylistic group from another. The way visual motifs are articulated and combined is crucial when dealing with themes that are shared by a number of different cultures contemporary with one another. As Winter has noted, subject matter or iconography then becomes much less important than style in determining the place of origin of a particular artwork.

Question 7 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage is primarily concerned with doing which of the following?

- ○A Comparing two writers' definitions of style
- ○B Refining a classification of stylistic elements

○A similar cultures often share similar form elements in their visual art

○B subject matter is relatively unimportant in determining the place of origin of a work of visual art

○C the elements that constitute visual style differ in their value for establishing relationships between artworks

○D the arrangement of form elements in works of visual art observes certain conventions

○E the distinguishing features of a particular visual style are likely to have analogs in the literary style that prevails in the same time and place

Question 9 RC

Question 13 is based on the following passage.

> Tropical forests typically have many more species of plants and animals than do temperate forests of comparable size. During the Ice Age, forests in temperate regions were destroyed, while those in the tropics were not. Accordingly, one proposed explanation of this difference in the number of species is that tropical forests typically had a much longer period than temperate forests in which different species could take hold.

Question 13 CR

Select one answer choice.

Which of the following, if true, most strongly supports the proposed explanation?

- ○ A The greater warmth of tropical forests enables them to sustain a greater density of plants and animals than temperate forests can.
- ○ B There is virtually no overlap between the species that are found in tropical forests and those found in temperate forests.
- ○ C Some areas that were temperate forests before the Ice Age are no longer forested.
- ○ D The number of plants and animal species is no greater in tropical forests that have arisen since the Ice Age than in temperate forests of comparable size.
- ○ E A change in climate tends to increase the rate at which new species become established in a region.

Questions 14 to 15 are based on the following passage.

The distinction between the nutritional quality and quantity of prey is one component of the hypotheses that attempt to explain the declining populations of Steller sea lions in the Gulf of Alaska beginning in the 1970s. One view holds that the quantity of prey available was high overall, but because of the species composition of available prey (primarily non-fatty fish of the gadid family), the diet was nutritionally inferior—the junk food hypothesis. An alternative view is that gadids are nutritionally adequate but were not available in sufficient numbers because of fishing or some other factor. In either case, juvenile sea lions would be affected more than mature individuals because of the younger animals' higher energy requirements and relative inexperience at foraging.

Question 14 RC

Select one answer choice.

The passage indicates that proponents of the junk food hypothesis assert which of the following about non-fatty fish of the gadid family?

○A They provide adequate nourishment for sea lions when supplemented with a small number of other species.

○B They provide adequate nutrition for adult sea lions but not for juveniles.

○C They have been steadily declining in quantity in the Gulf of Alaska since the 1970s.

○D They are inadequate to satisfy sea lions' nutrition requirements even when available in abundance.

○E They are too challenging for juvenile sea lions to catch in significant numbers.

Question 15 RC 복수

Consider each of the choices separately and select all that apply.

The highlighted sentence ("An alternative … factor.") performs which of the following functions in the passage?

☐A It demonstrates that over-fishing in the Gulf of Alaska is the likely cause of Steller sea lion decline.

☐B It supports an argument that the reason for the Steller sea lion decline in the Gulf of Alaska is unlikely to be determined.

☐C It gives an explanation for the decline in Steller sea lions in the Gulf of Alaska that is at odds with the junk food hypothesis.
