Biologists have long debated about whether egg production in birds is biologically highly costly, some theorizing that egg production is energetically or nutritionally demanding. Lack, however, suggested that clutch size—the number of eggs a bird lays per breeding cycle—is far below the potential limit of egg production. He suggested that clutch size had instead evolved in relation to the number of young that the parents could successfully rear. Subsequently, most studies focused on limitations operating during chick rearing, particularly among altricial species (species in which the parents feed their young in the nest). Lack later recognized that in precocial species (species in which young feed themselves), clutch size might be explained by different factors—the availability of food for egg-laying females, for example.

○D the availability of food for newly hatched chicks

○E the differences between altricial and precocial species

☐B In precocial species, clutch size is determined primarily by factors operating after eggs are laid.

☐C In many bird species, clutch size generally remains well below the potential limit of egg production.

In the book《China Men》(1980), Maxine Hong Kingston tells of Chinese Americans establishing identities in the United States. She acknowledges the importance of ethnicity (the national origins of one's ancestors or one's self), yet also the importance of geographical location aside from one's "homeland" and interactions with other cultures in identity formation. These latter ideas suggest similarity between Kingston and "border identity" theorists. These theorists challenge the arbitrariness of ethnic identities based on national boundaries, claiming that individual identity is influenced by the various cultures with which one interacts, especially in a mobile global society. Moreover, such theorists argue that identity requires redefinition either in terms of multiple nationalities or in terms of geographic units different from nations, such as cities.

Yet, redefining what it means to be an "American" without abandoning the term itself, Kingston distances herself from some border theorists. While recognizing multiple identities, she also counters border theorists' emphasis on mobility and disconnection from specific countries by emphasizing the importance of a sense of belonging for people occupying a land with others. Even so, to belong to America in Kingston's world is not to have a set identity, but rather to have the opportunity to reconstruct identity through group interactions.

During the early nineteenth century, the demand for ever-louder sound led to ever-increasing tension on piano strings, making evident the need for stronger framing. Even long after factories had taken over the manufacture of other commodities, the Industrial Revolution nevertheless shaped the attitudes of those who decided whether to accept this innovation. To build pianos with steam-powered tools was one thing, and to put a cast-iron frame at the center of the instrument, making the product itself a modern factory of sound rather than a fully handcrafted artwork in wood, was quite another. The resulting debate was vigorous, with many feeling certain that iron in the piano would ruin the tone.

Astronomers have had difficulty accounting for certain planets discovered outside our solar system. They are called hot Jupiters because each is similar in mass to Jupiter, the largest solar-system planet, but orbits its parent star at a fraction of the distance at which Earth, let alone Jupiter, orbits the Sun. In the standard, solar-system-based theory of planetary formation, such a massive planet could not form so close to a star. So most attempts to explain a hot Jupiter's existence envision it forming farther away, then migrating inward. According to one hypothesis, the planet's gravitational field tugs on the proto-planetary disk of dust and gas from which it formed. The disk exerts its own gravitational tug, and this interplay of forces robs the planet of momentum in its orbital path, forcing it to spiral in toward the star. According to another hypothesis, the planet's gravitational field is so strong that it creates a groove in the disk, partitioning it into inner and outer regions; the resulting gravitational interactions between the planet and these regions cause the planet to lose orbital momentum and spiral inward. Another question remains: what prevents the planet from continuing its spiral until it collides with the star?

○A An interplay of gravitational forces

○B A loss of orbital momentum

○C A protoplanetary disk composed of dust and gas

○D A protoplanetary disk divided into two regions

○E The movement direction of hot Jupiters

해설
가설 1: 행성 중력이 원시행성 원반을 당김 → 상호 작용으로 궤도 운동량 상실 → 나선형으로 안쪽 이동.
가설 2: 중력이 원반에 groove를 만들어 'partitioning it into inner and outer regions' → 운동량 상실 → 안쪽 이동.
두 영역으로 나뉜 원반은 가설 2에만 있음.
정답: D

⚠ 함정 / 오답 포인트
A(중력 상호 작용)는 가설 1에만 'interplay of forces'로 명시돼 끌리지만, 가설 2에도 'gravitational interactions'가 있어 둘 다 해당.

단어
protoplanetary disk 원시행성 원반 · momentum 운동량 · partition 분할하다 · groove 홈, 틈

It can be inferred from the passage that the "attempts" share which of the following goals?

○A to explain how a Jupiter-sized planet could form so close to its parent star

○B to explain what prevents a hot Jupiter from colliding with its parent star

○C to determine whether a hot Jupiter is formed from a protoplanetary disk of dust and gas

○D to determine whether a hot Jupiter's gravitational field is strong enough to create a groove in its protoplanetary disk

○E to account for hot Jupiters in a way that is not inconsistent with the standard theory of planetary formation

해설

→ 표준 이론과 충돌하지 않도록 '먼 곳에서 형성 후 이동'으로 설명하려는 것.
정답: E

⚠ 함정 / 오답 포인트
A는 '그렇게 가까이에서 형성되는 방법'을 설명한다고 하지만, 시도들은 오히려 가까이서 형성되지 않았다고 봄 — 관계를 뒤집음. B는 지문 마지막의 '남은 질문'.

The infectious disease known as whooping cough is commonly thought to be a childhood illness, but a recent study suggests that more adults contract this illness than was previously suspected. Although the disease is life-threatening in children, in adults it typically causes only a persistent cough which, though annoying, is rarely serious. Therefore, the incidence of whooping cough in adults poses no significant public health threat.

○C Most adults who contract whooping cough get the disease from children with whom they are in close contact.

○D A disease poses no significant public health threat unless it is life-threatening.

○E Under comparable conditions of exposure, adults contract whooping cough more readily than do children.

Carla L. Peterson's《Doers of the Word》(1997), a study of African American women speakers and writers from 1830-1880, is an important addition to scholarship on nineteenth-century African American women. Its scope resembles that of Frances Smith Foster's 1993 study, but its approach is quite different. For Foster, the Black women who came to literary voice in nineteenth-century America were claiming their rights as United States citizens, denying that anything should disqualify them from full membership in an enlightened national polity. Peterson sees these same women as having been fundamentally estranged from the nation by a dominant culture unsympathetic to Black women, and by a Black intelligentsia whose male view of race concerns left little room for Black female intellect.

The passage indicates that Peterson identifies which of the following as obstacles faced by the women included in her study?

☐ A The attitudes of Black male intellectuals toward female intellectual work

☐ B The discriminatory attitudes faced by Black women in nineteenth-century America as a whole

☐ C Disagreements among Black women speakers and writers themselves about the impact of the Black intelligentsia
