The deep water realm was once assumed to be _____, but we now know that submerged currents of cold water flowing from high latitudes toward the equator may generate high-energy eddies that reshape the seafloor.

○A virtually inaccessible

○B relatively peaceful

○C geologically active

○D completely lifeless

○E ecologically important

신호: 'was once assumed to be __, but we now know ...' → 과거의 가정과 현재 지식이 대조됨.

현재 사실: 차가운 해류가 고에너지 소용돌이(high-energy eddies)를 만들어 해저를 재형성함 = 역동적·격렬함.

빈칸 = 그 반대, '조용하고 평온하다'는 뜻.

relatively peaceful(비교적 평온한)이 정확히 대조를 이룸.

정답: B (relatively peaceful)

⚠ 함정 / 오답 포인트

geologically active는 'we now know' 쪽 내용과 같은 방향이라 대조가 성립하지 않음. inaccessible/lifeless는 에너지·지형 변화와 대조 축이 맞지 않음.

Modern scholarship's view of women's labor in Han dynasty China (B.C. 206 – A.D. 220) shows women performing a wide variety of work roles. According to most modern scholars, for a household (the main economic organization in early Chinese society) to succeed economically, a man and a woman each had to work at many different kinds of gendered tasks. In contrast, writers during the Han dynasty, rather than emphasizing the multitude of daily tasks women performed, constructed an idealized representation of female labor, singling out cloth production as the most important job and linking it to the concept of successful womanhood. In reality, however, a woman who devoted herself to making cloth, ignoring other work, would have been considered irresponsible.

According to the passage, which of the following is true of Han dynasty writers' attitudes toward women and cloth production?

☐ A These writers presented cloth production as a woman's most important job.

☐ B These writers believed that women who devoted significant time to tasks other than cloth production were irresponsible.

☐ C These writers linked cloth production with the concept of successful womanhood.

○C These writers overestimated the role of household labor in the Chinese economy.

○D These writers underestimated the contribution of men's labor to the Chinese economy.

○E These writers exaggerated the prominence of cloth production in women's labor.

Much recent work has examined the claim that women encounter increasing obstacles relative to men as they move up the organizational ladder in business. This proposition, which we term the increasing-disadvantage model, is a core element of the popular glass ceiling metaphor. Despite continued widespread public acceptance of the glass ceiling idea and some consistent findings, most research to date has failed to support the increasing disadvantage model. Indeed, several studies based on private-sector firms find that women's mobility prospects improve, rather than decline, as they climb upward in corporate hierarchies. In the public sector, researchers have found either no sex differences in mobility or a larger female disadvantage in lower grades.

Comparing cross-sectional national samples of workers, Baxter and Wright found no evidence in the United States, and only limited evidence in Sweden and Australia, that women's probability of being located in a higher versus a lower hierarchical level declined relative to men's at higher levels. Taken together, these findings suggest that the glass ceiling may be a myth. Women's scarcity in top organizational ranks may simply represent the cumulative effect of a constant—or even decreasing-disadvantage at successive hierarchical levels.

Feminist scholars have tended to regard women in the nineteenth-century United States who elected to remain single as champions of women's autonomy and as critics of marriage as an oppressive institution. Indeed, many nineteenth-century American women who participated in reform movements or who distinguished themselves as writers and professionals were single. Yet this view of single women tends to distort the meaning of their choices. The nineteenth century saw the elevation of marriage for love as a spiritual ideal. Consequently, it became socially acceptable for women not to marry if such an ideal marriage could not be realized with an available suitor. Thus, many women's choice to remain single reflected not a negative view of marriage but a highly idealistic one.

Where grazing reduces species diversity, a rangeland can be considered overgrazed. Conversely, where species diversity is increased by grazing, that grazing can be considered well managed. Although popular consensus characterizes the intensive grazing of rangelands surrounding the Mediterranean Basin as overgrazing, such intensive grazing is not necessarily destructive.

Crawley argues that the primary way in which herbivores affect plant species diversity is not by eating plants to extinction but by selective feeding, which modifies competition among plant species. For example, some species can survive because competition from more aggressive species that have been grazed is reduced. This mechanism is one of several that underlie the intermediate-disturbance hypothesis, which holds that biodiversity is higher with moderate disturbance of the ecosystem than with low or heavy disturbance. The impact of grazing in Mediterranean ecosystems can be considered in terms of this hypothesis. However, the grazing intensity that is necessary to cause intermediate disturbance in the grazing-resistant Mediterranean shrublands is generally quite high, and low-intensity to moderate-intensity grazing is often ineffective in preventing the encroachment and dominance of woody vegetation. In a study comparing two Greek islands, one "heavily overgrazed" by the Cretan wild goat and the other undergrazed, Papageorgiou found that there were many more species on the "overgrazed" island.

All the music from fourteenth-century Europe for which written scores survive is so complex and is written in such difficult notation that it could have been played only by musicians whose lives were dedicated solely to such performance. Yet fourteenth-century European accounts, which in this respect probably give accurate portrayals of their times, describe many members of the nobility who excelled not only in musical performance, but also in dancing, poetry, and painting.

Before feminist literary criticism emerged in the 1970s, the nineteenth-century United States writer Fanny Fern was regarded by most critics (when considered at all) as a prototype of weepy sentimentalism—a pious, insipid icon of conventional American culture. Feminist reclamations of Fern, by contrast, emphasize her non-sentimental qualities, particularly her sharply humorous social criticism. Most feminist scholars find it difficult to reconcile Fern's sardonic social critiques with her effusive celebrations of many conventional values. Attempting to resolve this contradiction, Harris concludes that Fern employed flowery rhetoric strategically to disguise her subversive goals beneath apparent conventionality. However, Tompkins proposes an alternative view of sentimentality itself, suggesting that sentimental writing could serve radical, rather than only conservative, ends by swaying readers emotionally, moving them to embrace social change.

The passage suggests which of the following about the “contradiction” mentioned in the highlighted sentence?

- ☐ A It was not generally addressed by critics before the 1970s.
- ☐ B It is apparent in only a small number of Fern’s writings
- ☐ C It has troubled many feminist critics who study Fern.

해설

'contradiction' = Fern의 신랄한 사회 비판 vs 관습적 가치에 대한 열렬한 찬양 사이의 모순.

A: 1970년대 이전 비평가들은 Fern을 '감상주의의 전형, 관습적 아이콘'으로만 봄 → 비판적 면모를 보지 못했으니 모순 자체를 다루지 않았음 → 참.

C: 'Most feminist scholars find it difficult to reconcile' → 많은 페미니스트 비평가를 곤란하게 함 → 참.

B: 일부 작품에만 나타난다는 근거 없음.

○C They exaggerate the extent to which Fern intended her writing to serve a social purpose.

○D They wrongly assume that sentimentalism must be a pejorative term.

○E They fail to recognize that sentimental rhetoric plays to reader’s emotions.

정답 관련 메모
원본 답안표가 회차마다 달랐던 문항입니다(D / E). 지문 근거로 D를 정답으로 확정했습니다. Conflicting keys D/E (this copy says E, verbal34 copy says D). Chose D: the pre-1970s critics treated sentimentalism as a put-down (weepy, insipid, conventional), while Tompkins argues sentimental writing can serve radical ends, so she would say they wrongly assume sentimentalism is necessarily pejorative. E fails because calling Fern 'weepy' shows the critics did recognize the emotional appeal.

해설
'critics' = 1970년대 이전 Fern을 'weepy sentimentalism', 'pious, insipid icon of conventional culture'로 본 비평가들 → 감상주의를 경멸적(무미건조·보수적)으로 사용.
Tompkins: 'sentimental writing could serve radical, rather than only conservative, ends' → 감상주의가 반드시 부정적·보수적인 것은 아님.
→ Tompkins는 비평가들이 감상주의를 '반드시 경멸적 용어'로 잘못 가정했다고 볼 것 → D.
E는 틀림: 비평가들은 'weepy'(눈물 짜는)라고 했으므로 감상적 수사가 감정에 호소한다는 점은 이미 인식함.
정답: D

⚠ 함정 / 오답 포인트
E는 Tompkins의 'swaying readers emotionally'를 연상시키는 함정—Tompkins의 핵심은 감정 호소가 '급진적 사회 변화'로 이어질 수 있다는 것이지, 비평가들이 감정 호소 자체를 몰랐다는 것이 아님.

pejorative 경멸적인 · sentimentalism 감상주의 · insipid 무미건조한 · pious 경건한, 독실한
